The arrival of the Normans in the late 12th century brought huge changes to Ireland. Those who settled did so largely in order to gain lands and titles and over the next number of centuries became Gaelicised with names such as Fitzgerald, Fitzhenry, Poer and de Bermingham. For the first time this is the comprehensive English and Irish history of one of those families whose name is derived from the city of Birmingham, England. The English line is traced from 1050 when the family held the Manor of Birmingham through successive generations until Edward Birmingham was cheated out of the title by John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland and Henry VIII in 1536. With the arrival of Strongbow and Robert Bermingham in Ireland it was the beginning of one of the oldest Baronies in recorded history, that of Baron Athenry, which spanned over 700 years. Included are such battles as the Battle of Athenry and the Battle of Faughart, in which Edward de Bruce, the Scottish king was defeated by Sir John de Bermingham. This book also contains images of all the Bermingham castles of Ireland, illustrations including the entire coat of arms gallery and contemporary poems and letters.
